

HISTORIC TOURING CARS

G'day

The Motorsport Australia 'Historic Production Base Eligibility Committee' have come back to the AHTCA with their recommendations for the minimum weights for Group N cars. And they want us to share this with all competitors Australia wide.

About 80%+ of cars are covered by this first list, with the balance coming later. Click this link to read the preamble, and there is a link within that to see the weights.

You can query your weight if you want. Just read the document to find out how.

If you have any question after having read the documents, please contact your AHTCA rep below.

Control Tyre(s)

Last month we asked competitors whether they had any interest in the AHTCA exploring control tyres. 66% of competitors replied 'yes'.

With that response in mind, the AHTCA will commence looking at the pros and cons, including costs and what affects or advantages it may have in the longer term.

More to come.

Tyre List Update

The Group N Tyre List has just been updated, with the inclusion of a new Hoosier.

Tyres updated are listed at the top of page 1 as well as in the tables.

QLD News...

Round one of the Queensland Cup for Group N Historic Touring Cars was held at Lakeside Park Brisbane on 15-16 April with a strong field and great racing.

Of interest from one of the Queensland Eligibility Officers was a report that when he was inspecting one of the cars, he found a fuel line fastened to a battery cable.

The owner had inadvertently connected them and was most grateful to the Eligibility Officer for his keen eyes.

This is just another example of working with our Eligibility Officers for a safer race car.

First ever EO Forum

The AHTCA together with Motorsport Australia helped make the first ever EO forum just for Group N EOs happen last week.

This is first step toward having consistent interpretation of the Group N rules Australia wide.

And further to that, now the AHTCA website has got an EO forum. This is a chat room dedicated to Technical Delegates and Eligibility Officers – they will use it to help each other, ask each other questions and connect with each other about technical interpretations. This helps competitors through consistent interpretation and application of rules , no matter where you compete is the goal.
